County jail cramped

Editor's note: The inmate's name has been changed to protect his anonymity.

by Jill Trudeau
editorial editor

Except for two trips next door to Common Pleas Court, John hasn't been outside in 4½ months.

He spends his days watching television, listening to the radio and playing cards. Occasionally he writes letters, and he always eats his meals at the same time: 7:30 a.m., 11:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

John, 20, is one of about 50 inmates at the Wood County Jail.

Like most of the inmates, he has one cellmate. Besides their respective cell - measuring 8 feet by 10 feet - the prisoners are provided with a community room called the bullpen. There are tables and chairs in the bullpen, and it is there that they may watch TV or listen to the radio.

Around three sides of the bullpen is a hallway, with windows, called the catwalk. Originally, it was built to provide the prisoners with some exercise and some diversion - looking out of the window.

However, except for an hour or so every day, the catwalk is kept locked up.

Since John has been there, the catwalk has been opened a couple of times in addition to that hour a day - which he said is mostly for cleaning purposes - because "one of the nicer guards" let them in.

ACCORDING TO Wood County Sheriff George Ginter, the catwalk usually is kept closed because the prisoners used to whistle at women passing by outside.

So the only exercise the prisoners can have is calisthenics in their cell or the bullpen, Ginter said.

Kaye Vermett, the jail matron, said "the lack of exercise area" is the worst problem in the jail.

"It's just cramped; it's just too small," she said. "They get no exercise at all."

Recreation is one of the areas in which the jail does not meet state standards, Ginter said. Another area is visitation.

Visitation is conducted through a window 3 inches high and 6 inches wide, according to Vermett. Below the window is a mesh opening, about the same size, through which the visitor and inmate stand and talk.

There are two visiting windows next to each other, which John said doesn't allow for much privacy.

"THEY'RE (ANOTHER visitor and inmate) not even a foot away from you and you just can't talk," he said.

Ginter said the jail should provide two tables separated by a large glass window, with telephones for the inmate and visitor.

Visitation is restricted to Tuesdays, 9 to 11 a.m. and 6 to 9 p.m.; Thursdays, 1 to 4 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 to 11 a.m. - about 20 minutes per visit.

The jail meets fire and food standards; for example, a dietician is there to make sure balanced meals are available, Ginter said.

"You can survive off it (the food)," was John's comment.

John also complained about the mail, which Ginter said always is opened to check for contraband - such as drugs - and for money, which is put into accounts for each prisoner.

According to John, some of the guards tell him "half the Two University and four Chamber of Commerce representatives have been named to a Chamber committee on improving communications between the University and city businesses.

The University representatives are Karl Vogt, vice-president for operations, and Phillip Mason, executive assistant to University President Paul Olscamp. Mason represents the University at the monthly Chamber meetings. Vogt and Mason were selected by University President Paul Olscamp.

Representing the Chamber will be Sheilah Fulton, Chamber of Commerce second vice-president, John Mura, owner of Falcon House sporting goods store, Erie Radel, of Radel and Company, a Bowling Green accounting firm, and Jerry Liss, owner of Pisanello's Pizza.

THEIR NAMES were scheduled to be announced at the regular meeting of the Chamber this morning.

uled to be announced at the regular meeting of the Chamber this morning.

The committee met for the first time Monday to organize themselves. No date has been set for a second meeting, although one is planned, Joan Gordon, executive director of the Chamber, said.

Gordon said the committee would meet as needed, with no regular scheduled meeting time, to exchange information concerning city and University business activities. Representatives from retail operations on University property, such as the bookstore and the Student Recreation Center, will be brought in to discuss University retail policies.

The committee was formed in response to city merchants wanting to know whether the University's retail operations would have any effect on their businesses. The resolution authorizing the committee was announced by the Chamber March 1.

Damages low

University reports $25,468 loss

by Phillip B. Wilson
staff reporter

With the close of spring semester comes the yearly residence hall damage reports. According to a Harold Junk, the destruction hasn't been that bad.

Junk, coordinator for trades and improvement, said the there has been $25,468 in damage at the University from the beginning of fall semester to April 16, 1985.

Founders Quadrangle has the most damage of any dormitory with $8,230, which was almost twice as high as the next expense, Kreisher Quadrangle, which had $4,446 damage. Prout Hall had the least amount of damage, at an expense of $293.

Junk said these figures represent the total amount of money spent on the buildings, including the dorm rooms. He said University students aren't as destructive as the numbers might indicate, because there are usually only a "handful" of students responsible.

"THE PERCENTAGE of students that create the problems are very small," Junk said. "Compared to other universities I've been to, our living quarters are excellent."

One of the reasons he believes the damage rate has increased in Founders Quadrangle is the new co-ed policy which began in the fall of 1983. He said men were more costly residents than women, "as far as damage was concerned." Since the switch from an all male dorm to the present co-ed situation in Rogers Quadrangle, damages have decreased significantly.

"When it's spring, we have more screen and window damage than anything else," Junk said. "If the damage is something unusual, we'll come out and give the resident adviser an estimate."

Graduating seniors express satisfaction with University

Editor's note: This is the third in three-part series on graduating seniors.

by Benjamin Harrison
news editor

The pressures of finals are mounting. It may seem as if there is no way to get everything done in the allotted time frame.

Some freshmen are not used to the pressures... some sophomores remember the pressure, but still are not able to fully deal with it... juniors know there's only one year left... and graduating seniors are sighing relief, it's all over.

Students may wonder, "Is it all worth it?" According to the 50 graduating seniors surveyed, it is.

The students were asked, "Are you satisfied with your years at Bowling Green?"

Gary Bernardes, computer science major: "Yes, very much so. I have made friends here

Seniors reflect on experiences that I will never forget. I have had a great time and feel it was definitely worth it. Oh yeah, I got a degree, too."

Maria Emery, special education major: "Yes. I truly feel that this University has prepared me for my future and my career."

Sue Berg, marketing major: "As the years have progressed, I have realized that a four-year education is nothing more than a 'survival of the fittest' course. Hopefully, after all of the sacrificing, there will be some rewards."

Kelly Wigner, business education major: "Yes. Overall they have been good. College has taught me a lot, not only academically, but socially."

James VandeVelde, selling and sales major: "Yes. I've been here long enough (five years). Just let me leave here with a degree."

A few of those surveyed wished to remain anonymous, only revealing their first name:

Rich, computer science major: "It was really slow the first few years, but after I realized I had to be the one to get things going, it was super."

Steve, a journalism major: "Yeah. I got a lot of opportunities here that I would never have gotten at other schools. I'm not sure what I would be doing if I hadn't taken advantage of the opportunities. The main thing you want to do when you come to college is find something you want to do and pursue it, and that's what I did."

"Fester," still declaring himself an "undeclared major": "I had a great time. Don't get me wrong - I busted my butt in my classes. But when study time ended, 'Miller time' began."

State homes investigated

Celeste orders report after death, illness

COLUMBUS (AP) -Gov. Richard Celeste yesterday asked state officials to draft a preliminary report on the death of a woman due to malnutrition and the illness of two others in Cincinnati group homes for the mentally retarded.

The request came on the heels of a separate call for resignations at another southwestern Ohio home by Minnie Johnson, director of the Ohio Department of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities.

Celeste asked David Williams, director of the Governor's Office of Advocacy for Disabled Persons, and Johnson to make a report by the end of business yesterday.

The governor said he is deeply concerned about what has happened in homes operated by Meridian Community Care.

"He's asked for a preliminary report, and then he'll take it from there," Debra Phillips, a spokeswoman in the governor's office, said.

In the Cincinnati case, the Hamilton County coroner's office said Carol Simonson, 43, once a resident of the now-closed Orient Developmental Center in Pickaway County, was dead on arrival at University Hospital and Medical Center in Cincinnati last Nov. 7.

SHE DIED of malnutrition and dehydration, the coroner reported after an autopsy. Simonson was taken to the hospital from a Meridian group home on Plankinton Way in Cincinnati, officials said. The woman had previously been a resident of another Meridian home on Scottwood Avenue.

Editorial Boos and bravos

Here it is - the long-awaited end of the 1984-85 school year. With summer around the bend, this seems like a good time for some final comments on the school year.

Bravo to USG for organizing Springfest '85. It was a success both in finance and in spirit, and hopefully it helped dispel some community resentment left after last year's Manville Madness.

Boo to some city officials who would like to make next year's Springfest a community carnival. Why can't we have one big party, just for ourselves?

Bravo to University President Paul Olscamp for canceling 1½ days of classes because of snow. Consider doing it more often!

Boo to the Ohio Department of Transportation and Conrail for all the delays in installing gates at railroad crossings. How many people have to die?

Bravo to Women for Women - not necessarily for their opinions, but for stirring up this too-oft apathetic campus. And speaking of apathetic...

A resounding boo to most of the students who asked questions of Ronald Reagan at last fall's rally. You should have come up with something that would make him think - not blush with pleasure.

Bravo to yet another fine season by Bowling Green quarterback Brian McClure, who appears destined to make it to the pro ranks.

Boo to the University for making us look at those dull cement blocks in front of the Administration Building, year after year. They are supposed to be a fountain, but it is never turned on.

But bravo to the University for approving photo IDs. They'll make life easier for students next year.

Boo to the incredibly harsh Student Arbitration Board, who decided that an ill-thought-out April Fool's joke warranted three RAs' suspension from the University. Haven't you ever pulled a dumb joke?

And bravo, finally, to the graduating seniors. You've worked hard and we wish you the best. Happy summer, everybody.

Short, short hair, straight leg blue jeans (dungarees), button down shirts, sneakers, penny loafers: the uniform.

Seedling journalists settle into a new home; a place to work, a place to play. It's 1959. The BG News moves into University Hall rooms 105 and 106. The walls are eggshell white. The color's nice. It's easy on the eyes. It'll be a nice place to work.

The School of Journalism offices are right across the hall. Some days, a Newser can go to work, visit with a prof and go to class and never walk more than a few hundred feet.

You see the Kennedy-Nixon debate? Kennedy killed Nixon. Now, I like Nixon. He knows his stuff.

Students practice writing, practice dealing with people. Some are obsessed with the newspaper. Some write one story and, for whatever reason, never come back. First articles get published. Writers get their feet wet; some become famous (or semi-famous) authors. Some of them graduate and never write again.

Holy Jesus. Nam, man, you're going to Nam.

I don't want to go, man. Sometimes the powers that be make decisions and there ain't nothing you can do about it.

The office: friends, enemies, romances; ambition, lethargy; office hockey, office basketball, office baseball, bigtime wrestling (boys will be boys); all-nighters; interviews, jobs. The office was thousands of different things to the hundreds of people who worked there.

The quarters were cramped in the School of Journalism. Each professor's cell was clustered around a central pool, a meeting place, The Lounge.

Emil Dansker's cell was as much of a museum as it was an office. Forty years of journalism paraphernalia covered the walls from ceiling to floor. I was there when he closed his office door for the last time.

The moving men were taking out his desk, the last thing left in the cubicle. Everyone else had already gone to West Hall. In the lounge, a few boxes lay scattered, waiting to be moved.

He was more human than at any other time I had ever known him. He leaned against the doorway as two overweight men in blue coveralls grunted and groaned to get the oak desk onto a dolly. He didn't say anything. No reminiscences, no anecdotes, nothing. He just stared, not at the room really, someplace past the room.

The desk was gone. He stepped into the empty cube and looked at the dust marks on the floor around where there used to be filing cabinets, boxes, a table. Hundreds of students, a yearbook full of faces, had sat in this room. How many hours were spent here working, on the phone, grading papers? Thousands. Tens of thousands.

He bent over and picked up a paper clip.

"This is it - the last of it. Anybody want a souvenir?"

He stopped short in his motion to return the silver scrap to its resting place on the floor. He looked at the paper clip and stuck it in his pocket.

The School of Journalism has completed its migration. Some professors have moved their classes to West Hall. The building really hasn't started to bustle yet; it still glows with newness.

I visited the future home of The BG News a few days ago. My footsteps echoed down the empty, virgin hallways. I bumped into Emil Dansker and he walked with me for a while. Light from fluorescent tubes glinted off shiny linoleum. The muffled tapping of an electric typewriter was coming from an insulated office somewhere.

He looked at me. "You know, it's not quite the same. I like it here, but it's not the same."

"Yeah, I know what you mean." I half-expected to see a hospital orderly dressed in surgical garb spring from behind one of the doors wheeling a gurney.

Newspapers are a lot of things, but they were never meant to be clean. One look at your hands after reading a paper tells you that. Newspapers do their most good when they're uncovering corruption, crime - dirt. They were never meant to operate in an antiseptic atmosphere.

In a few weeks, they'll come to get us. Overweight movers in blue coveralls will tote off the files, the computers, the typewriters. They'll disturb dust that's been settling for 26 years - dust older than anyone who wrote a story in this issue.

Short hair, straight leg blue jeans, button down shirts, high top basketball shoes, penny loafers: new wave conservatism.

A new generation of seedling journalists prepares to enter a new home. But newer doesn't mean better.

I don't want to go, man. Sometimes the powers that be make decisions and there ain't nothing you can do about it.

Letters

Don't suspend RAs

I'm really steamed, and I want to write this letter before I cool off and forget about how mad I am.

This is in response to the April 24 front page article concerning the April Fool's joke played by three Mac East resident advisors, and their consequential suspension from the University.

I feel that this decision is analogous to "getting the death penalty for a parking violation." I lived in Mac East for a year, and I know that the RAs do a good job for the most part.

When I read the part in the article about how the Student Arbitration Board (who basically, are just students like you and me) made the decision to suspend the RAs, the first thought that ran through my mind, (besides, "Gosh, if that were me I'd commit Hara Kiri.") was "How could students do this to students?"

Students all know how much blood, sweat and tears it takes working toward your diploma. Also, on-campus students (and I know that at least one of those on SAB is on-campus), are well aware of how much joking around goes on in the residence halls.

One SAB member informed me that some residents testified that many people were in a state of hysteria when this incident happened. Well, if this was truly the case (and I have reason to believe that the testimonies might have been a little melodramatic), then the residents of Mac East were lucky that there was not really an emergency. Just think, you have 400 "crying, hysterical" girls cramming stairwells and pushing and shoving each other during a real tornado or a fire, the result could be severely tragic.

Also, I feel that this incident may reflect how our university trains its resident advisors. The person who I talked to on SAB informed me that the three RAs testified that they were not previously familiar with the student code. Tell me if I'm expecting too much, but shouldn't RAs be tested on the student code in order to be RAs? After all, their job is to enforce it, isn't it? This is why I feel that the incident is just as much the fault of the University.

Again, as for the decision of suspension, students who stab their roommates get suspended, students who try to bomb the Bursar's office get suspended; the point is that these three girls are being put on the same level as almost common psychopathic criminals.

Read before writing

In response to Angie Souza's letter on James Vanzant (BG News April 10), I wish to give her some advice. Read your source more thoroughly before you go on your glory crusade to criticize. By claiming that "Vanzant insists that Reagan is God," it's obvious that you didn't read this article or other articles in the past. If you had, then you would know that Vanzant's opinion of Reagan is far from calling him God.

In the letter, Ms. Souza says that Vanzant holds Reagan responsible for all of the decisions on Capitol Hill. In Vanzant's article, it is stated that Reagan signs legislation. Think back to your government classes Angie. Legislation means that Congress makes them. It is the President who signs it or vetoes it. Since he signed the legislation mentioned in the article, he takes the final blame for the results of that legislation.

Ms. Souza again tries to justify her argument by saying that Reagan appoints many competent advisers to help guide them in his decisions. Since Vanzant never mentions Reagan making all of the decisions himself, it is invalid for her to mention this in her letter.

If your letter was meant in sarcasm, go back to English 112 and get all the practice you can. I would also like to give you some additional advice for future letter writing Ms. Souza. If you continue to write letters that lead people to believe you don't read the articles that you complain about, take your own advice and give up your part-time crusade against Vanzant and leave the writing to someone else.

Get crossing gates

Well, it happened again. At approximately 10:00 p.m. on Wednesday, April 24th, AN-OTHER car got hit by a train as it traveled northbound through Bowling Green.

The first incident, at least to my knowledge, was when an elderly man's car was struck and split in two at the Clough Street crossing. Next, four people were killed when the car they were traveling in was demolished while crossing at Rt. 280. Now this. Two people injured while crossing the tracks at Frazee Ave. We may not know the circumstances but we damn sure know the results.

There is now a flashing light warning system at Frazee. That is to say there are no gates. Apparently this was not enough. At least gates signify to the driver that it is too late to try to beat the train.

Just what does it take to get crossing gates put up at these dangerous intersections? I'm glad to say they now have warning gates at the Clough Street crossing, but at what cost? Does it take an accident to prove that these are dangerous intersections?

I certainly hope the city board weighs the costs of implementing crossing gates throughout Bowling Green against the cost of not. If you had seen the accident, as I had, you would know that the benefits outweigh the costs by a mile.

Change the world

I'd like to respond to Scott Wilson's letter "So let's start giving." I agree that we do need to start giving. Mr. Wilson stated, "The question that comes to mind is this: Why has no major group on campus made an effort to raise money for the Ethiopian cause?"

Two weeks ago at least four campus Christian organizations united with World Vision to raise money for Ethiopia. Although only half of the groups have reported back, almost $6,500 has been raised. A contribution of $11 will feed a child for a month.

World Vision is a world-wide Christian relief organization. Whereas the U.S. Government support has been tied up in political red tape or has been diverted, World Vision uses its own planes and trucks to deliver the supplies where they are needed, bypassing a lot of political red tape.

The problem in Ethiopia is not just one person's or a group's responsibility, it's everyone's responsibility. The question that should be asked is this: What are you, Mr. Wilson, as well as you readers (including myself), doing about the problem in Ethiopia? Before the world can change enough to make a difference, the change must first come in the lives of individuals.

To find out more how one can help, contact: World Vision, Box O, Monrovia, CA 91016.

Latta won't listen

On Thursday, April 18th, seven BG students arrived in Washington, D.C. to lobby against nuclear arms. Prior to our arrival, several attempts were made to arrange an appointment with Delbert Latta, our district representative. All efforts failed and it was obvious that Del Latta had no interest in seeing any of his constituents. Latta has been in office for 26 years and has consistently voted for nuclear arms. Our main emphasis was to make him aware that people really are concerned about the issue.

We were able to speak with his chief aide, Joan Sutherland. Throughout the questioning, Ms. Sutherland was on the defense. Just like the responses of any other politician, many of our questions were evaded or not directly answered.

As the lobbying continued, we inquired about Latta never coming to speak on campus unless it was for publicity reasons. Naturally her response was that Delbert is a very busy man, as if no other person in office is never busy.

Before leaving, we gave Ms. Sutherland a poster made by a BG student against nuclear arms that had a vast number of signatures from other students. Hopefully our being there made some type of impression and a new beginning to discontinue Delbert Latta's ignorance about his fellow neighbors.

A harsh punishment

The three Mac RAs who gave the false tornado warning on April 1 were very wrong in doing so. It was a serious matter that they should have considered much more before doing something like it. Granted, as RAs they must set a good example for everyone else.

But I am sure the girls did not act with malicious intent to hurt anyone. It certainly was bad judgment, but was it really terrible enough for them to be kicked out of school and given no credit for classes this semester?

I urge Standards and Procedures to reconsider the decision, and to find an alternate punishment besides kicking the girls out of school. The girls made a big mistake, but probably didn't mean to cause such harm. A college education is much too important and much too expensive to be stopped by one incident in which a very condemnable but human mistake was made.

The punishment seems too extreme: emotionally, educationally, economically and academically. Remember, a semester of classes is an accomplishment that requires immense work, money and dedication, and it should not be just thrown out the window.

I hope the decision is not upheld. I also hope there is consistency in future disciplinary situations for any student who pulls a false fire alarm, for instance, or vandalizes the residence halls, in which harm is very clearly intended.

Tone it down, Borsi

Well congratulations goes out to the BG News and Ms. Dianna Borsi, after four years of apathetically reading countless editorials about Women for Women and sexism on campus, I finally decided to write my own comments.

It would appear to me that after four grueling years of editorial battle, we seem to have come to a stalemate concerning just what the heck feminism is all about. To be quite honest, I didn't even know what a feminist was until I came here to BG. Thank you for educating me. However, the problem seems to lie in the approach that the BG feminists take in expressing their views.

After four years of cutting, bleeding, tear-jerking editorials, a brief analysis should be viewed. I happen to think that what the feminists stand for is, after all, a good cause. I don't care who gets whatever job, just as long as they can do it the best. On the other hand, I have noted some vocal feminists condemning nearly every male on the face of the earth! You have a good cause, but every time you start lashing out at everybody, it's little wonder that everybody is so defensive. Personally, I cringe whenever I see an article subtitled by Ms. Borsi. (It's like, "Oh God, what now?")

I'm no expert on word-wars, but at least I can recognize ultra-emotional propaganda when I see it. Hey, you have got a good cause, it's worth fighting for, but for your own benefit, tone it down a little on the out-right attacks. It's the actions of a few that can give a bad name to the many.

Coke takes Pepsi challenge

New formula gives Coke sweeter taste

by Meg Tierney
staff reporter

All the world was taught to sing by Coke because Coke was it. Now, the new generation - led by Lionel Richie and Geraldine Ferraro - are saying that Pepsi is their choice. This new generation is having a tremendous effect on the cola industry and what is called the "Cola War."

Coca-Cola Co. announced a change in their formula last week to make the original Coke sweeter. "For the last six months they have been saying they were better because they weren't as sweet, and then they do a 180-degree turn and sweeten the product," Robert Johnson, general manager of RKO Bottlers for Pepsi-Cola Inc., in Toledo said.

"It is a continuing process to stay on top and we have been conducting ongoing research to know what the consumer wants. The change (in Coke's original formula) is a result of extensive testing and results that proved that new Coke is a superior product," Martin Kelly, division manager for Coca-Cola Bottlers of Ohio, said.

Coke claims to be number one. But in actuality, Coke has been taking a back seat to Pepsi, Johnson said.

IN THE HOME market, where the consumer has a choice between Pepsi and Coke, rant in the world," Johnson said.

Kelly disagreed. "We (Coke) enjoy a 2:1 sales advantage in the United States and a 3:1 sales advantage internationally (excluding the United States)," Kelly said. This sales advantage is determined by industry researchers who use reports such as the Nielsen rating figures.

Pepsi is handling the change in formula very cautiously.

drinkers may try new Coke to see if it tastes better than Pepsi, Johnson said.

The Coca-Cola company's expectations are positive. The national responses were very positive, and everyone seems to be anxious to try new Coke, Kelly said. They believe that the people who haven't tried it yet are willing to try it and expect to like it, he said.

The expectations of both companies doing extremely well did not stop Pepsi from rejoicing about the change in the 99-year-old Coke formula.

The president and chief executive officer of Pepsi-Cola Inc. announced that "victory is sweet and we have earned a celebration." All Pepsi employees were given the day off on April 26 in order to celebrate.

The cola war has reached Bowling Green, too. Out of the eight merchants talked to, seven of them said that Pepsi was their leading seller. This margin went from just a bit above to a 5:1 ratio. The eighth store said that right now it is "just about even." None of the merchants wished to be identified.

Pepsi has outsold Coke for a number of years, Johnson said.

Kelly had no comment on Coke's success in the home market.

"The only reason that Coke is number one is because they have the McDonald's account and that is the leading restaura-

There will be no change in the formula for Pepsi, and they do not see this change as a business problem. In fact they feel that business will be better for both companies, Johnson said.

WHAT MAY change is loyalty. Avid Coke drinkers may switch to Pepsi because they are mad at Coca-Cola, yet avid Pepsi-

Innovations win award for Well

by Jim Nleman
staff reporter

The Peer Nutrition Consulting Service was given an award by the Ohio College Personnel Association (OCPA) Friday for being the most innovative program in the state. The service is a program developed by Theresa Popp Braun, director of The Well.

The innovative program award is presented annually to the student affairs staff member, office or division which has initiated a new or unique approach to a college policy, problem or program, Braun said.

The nutrition service, operated by senior dietetic majors, is set up to answer on an individual basis student questions concerning vitamins, diets, eating on a budget and any other nutrition topic, Braun said.

"(The award) tries to recognize programs that meet specific needs of students in innovative, cost-effective ways," said Braun, a graduate student majoring in college student personnel. The award ceremonies were held at Hiram College in Hiram, Ohio.

Braun said those considered for the award are "people that work in student affairs and student development types of positions." These include programs in "student health to residence life, Greek life, academic advising, financial aid, student activities, counseling," and others, she said.

THE OCPA, a division of the American College Personnel Association, is an organization "primarily set up to promote professional growth and development among people who work in this field," Braun said.

To be considered for the award, Braun had to submit a written report explaining the nutrition service and the need that it filled on campus. Also required in the report was a self evaluation of the program with suggestions on how it could be improved and a description on how it could be implemented on other campuses.

"I've already gotten two inquiries from other schools - one in North Carolina and one in Ohio," Braun said.

Good luck on finals!

Here's the inside story of our new Buttermilk Biscuits.

Why are our Buttermilk Biscuits so fresh and delicious? Cause we make 'em the good old-fashioned way - from scratch.

First we start with the best ingredients like real buttermilk. Then we roll the dough to just the right thickness and cut out each biscuit by hand.

Next we pop 'em in our biscuit ovens - where they're baked up in small batches all through the day. So they're always fresh-just like our Kentucky Fried Chicken is.

Well, that's the inside story. Drop by and taste our extra Buttermilk Biscuits for yourself. Or pick up an extra dozen for the family.

And enjoy them happily ever after.

Sexuality class can be a surprise

by Debra Hoschouer
reporter

When a student says he or she has taken a human sexuality class offered through health education, the question that probably comes up most is "What were the sex films really like?"

According to Mel Brodt, an associate professor of Health, Physical Education and Recreation (HPER) and director of sexuality instruction, students are surprised to see what the course is really about.

"I think when they're coming into the course, they're expecting some how-to-do and this kind of stuff. They hear about the films, and that's passed on, but when they get into the course they see what the syllabuses are all about, and they see a little bit more than they had anticipated," he said.

John Piper, an associate professor of HPER and Molly Lafflin, HPER instructor, also teach the course covering a wide range of topics such as the history of human sexuality research, loving and being loved, heterosexual intercourse and numerous others.

What the course doesn't cover is morality.

"I've found over the years that we try to stay away from the morality aspect. We try to keep it as open as possible without any biases," Brodt, who has taught the course since the early 1970s, said.

"I THINK the neutrality or the objectivity of the instructor is important so that the students feel comfortable whatever their value system - that they can listen to opposite points of view as well as their own points of view on controversial sex issues," Piper said.

Total objectivity is difficult, and the instructors' personal biases may show up in their classes.

"I think any of us are going to let our biases show on occasion, but to stand up on a soap-box and say this is better than that or this lifestyle is the one everyone ought to follow would be an injustice, I think, to students intellectual and emotional character development."

Brodt said the instructors try to alleviate some of the embarrassment students may feel "desensitizing" sexual issues through a gradual approach with the films, beginning with animal sexual behavior and ending with human sexual behavior.

Lafflin has a "communication activity" in which she has her students come up with other words for certain sexual terms. She said once they say the words themselves, and laugh about them, they've broken the barriers and are able to "talk with each other about their feelings."

BRODT HAS his students list at least two questions they have about sexuality.

"Sometimes they're hesitant to ask questions... as we go through the semester, those questions usually get answered," he said.

The instructors agreed that small group discussions have many advantages.

Piper has group members share something with the rest of the groups, and everyone has a chance to ask questions, he said. In small groups, students usually talk, but in large groups they tend to just sit.

"I love the controversy because then people learn that not everyone feels the same way about things," Lafflin said.

Some controversy arises when films are shown. The instructors realize that the films may make people uncomfortable because of the graphic depiction of sex, but believe the films are beneficial in teaching the course.

Lafflin said she has had more reaction from the explicitness of the birth film than from the explicitness of the others.

"Some say it's beautiful, others don't know if they can take the pain. I have to work through that a lot - the fears of childbirth," she said.

THE INSTRUCTORS agreed that one of the topics students are least informed about is homosexuality. Lafflin said it's the "one they know the least about but are really fearful of asking questions."

All of the classes discuss birth control, but Lafflin said the assumption that all the students taking the class are sexually active is false.

A high percentage of his students are non-virgins, but the percentage of virgins has increased this year, according to surveys he has taken in his classes, Brodt said.

Lafflin and Brodt emphasized that because people are sexually active doesn't necessarily mean they're knowledgeable about their sexuality.

The instructors said they hope that in teaching these courses they are educating future parents that sexual matters should be talked about, not hidden.

Kathy Shaw, senior sociology major who took the course, said it is not a "blow-off," as some students believe it is.

Michele Vanesky, junior social work major, said the course allowed students to "get together and discuss a sensitive topic like sexuality and be open and honest about it."

Learning about sex Classroom goals clear

by Debra Hoschouer
reporter

After one session, students in Elizabeth Allgeier's human sexuality class know exactly what they're in for.

Allgeier, an associate professor of psychology, said one of her goals in the first lecture is what researchers call "informed consent."

"I talk about really what the course is going to cover, and my goal there is to make it very clear that it's going to be very explicit," she said.

In the first session, Allgeier said, she encourages students to withdraw "if they feel that they are going to be uncomfortable or that these kinds of explicit discussions are at variance with their moral values."

Allgeier said she keeps morality out of her discussions except in the issue of sexual assault, on which she takes "a strong value stance," because of the universal agreement that it's wrong.

Allgeier is the president-elect of the Society for the Scientific Study of Sex, and an associate editor of the Journal of Sex Research, which she feels helps her keep abreast of the extremely active field.

SHE EMPHASIZED that her class is research oriented, and is demanding because the course goes across the biology, psychology and sociology fields.

"It demands a lot of knowledge from a lot of different areas because our sexuality is an interdisciplinary thing. It involves our biology, and how we feel, what we've learned in our culture," she said.

Shelley Travis, a psychology major and past student in Allgeier's class, said she learned a great deal. "Not only did I learn the physiological aspect, but I learned the whole psychological realm of sexuality," she said. Blake Gilley, a junior accounting major enrolled in the class this semester, said it's a shame the class isn't required for students.

"Talking about sex would relieve a lot of pressure in society. It helps being open and communicating. It's (sex) something that, even today, some people don't know about, no matter how much education they have," he said.

Allgeier said she covers a wide range of topics in class, starting out with the history of sexual attitudes and behavior, and ending with the relationship between sex and love.

HER COURSE is primarily lecture, along with a sexual preference panel consisting of heterosexuals, homosexuals and bi-sexuals of both genders. The class sees five movies in the course of the semester, and she uses a movie rating system - evaluations filled out by students - to assess their usefulness for future classes.

Allgeier shows the birth film that the University now owns, and brings in all the various birth control devices and passes them around the class. She said a knowledge of childbirth and birth control is important, especially for this age group, since according to her surveys, the majority are sexually active and don't use contraception when they begin.

Allgeier has specific goals for the students in her classes.

"I want them to be able to evaluate in the future the conclusions that are made in the popular press about various studies that are done on sexuality."

"I want them to be sophisticated consumers of information - and they are," she said.

Prof gives advice on insurance

by Stacey Longacre reporter

Life insurance, one of the many concerns faced by graduating seniors, isn't always understood.

Life insurance policy premiums are based on mortality tables. The tables are based on the determined number of deaths per 1,000 people for every age up to 100. For instance, an estimated 1.99 out of every 1,000 27-year-olds will die in one year.

As a person gets older the risk of death increases, so the premium rates go up. All life insurance is sold in $1,000 increments called face value.

Premium rates based on mortality tables are lower because they don't include the insurance company's overhead or profit margin.

According to an insurance professor, two general types of insurance are available. They are term life insurance and whole life insurance. The professor did not wish to be identified because he doesn't want an increase in the number of calls requesting information about personal policies.

The term insurance is a temporary policy covering the policy holder for periods of one, five and 10 years. Costs are lower in the short run for this insurance compared to whole life insurance because it is temporary.

THE PROBLEM with term insurance is that it is temporary. An example would be if a holder of this policy type had a non-fatal heart attack during the year of coverage. This would render the policy holder uninsurable and unable to renew the policy, he said.

This type of policy is cost prohibitive at older ages as rates increase with age.

Whole life insurance has a guaranteed premium rate. This means that, although the rates increase with age, a person's rates do not increase if a heart attack or other health problem occurs, and it does not make them uninsurable.

The professor said insurance agents do not press college students.

He suggested that students "avoid signing anything to do with promissory notes," which is different from the insurance policy itself. He said "you are contractually obligated to pay the promissory premium and usually make up for promised cheaper rates at first, later on."

"By signing one you are opening yourself up to some problems," he added.

The professor said "choosing the best policy should be based on your needs," such as temporary needs versus permanent needs.

Temporary needs favoring a one-year term policy would include burial, the need to pay for burial expenses and for a surviving spouse to live on.

Permanent needs, favoring a whole-life insurance policy, would include dependent children and a home mortgage.

Water management protects underground reserves

by Chris Smith reporter

Water is a resource commonly thought to be inexhaustible. But even though the earth's surface is seventy-tenths water, less than 1 percent of it is readily usable.

Because surface and underground sources continue to be polluted and overdrawn, a world water crisis has resulted.

Despite polluted waters, Ohio has been comparatively free of any water shortages. Most Ohioans have never experienced such a problem and Karl Schurr, professor of biology, hopes they never will.

"As long as Ohio does not waste its water or contaminate it, we will make it just fine," Schurr said.

Schurr said that this does not mean Ohio is without problems to address.

"Our most serious threat is the channelization of streams so water will run off too quickly to be able to recharge the aquifers (underground water) in Ohio."

A second threat is the low water during summer and the consequent loss of dilution of toxic and carcinogenic wastes.

A RECENT article in The Wall Street Journal noted that Ohio and its neighboring states are blessed with close proximity to the Great Lakes. Acting as a gigantic reservoir, the Great Lakes contain 95 percent of the country's fresh surface water.

The Wall Street Journal also noted that states from the Southwest and West are eyeing the Lakes as an additional water source. One plan is to pipe water from Lake Superior to the Missouri basin.

These plans are presumably based on the logic that water from such a huge source couldn't possibly be missed by the surrounding inhabitants.

But transporting water is too costly. Because of this, Schurr said he believes those people in the southern and western states will eventually be forced to "move back to where the water is - the North."

The water shortage is serious, and the solutions are not readily at hand.

Desalinization - converting salt water into fresh water - is not the answer. "It's impractical and too expensive," Schurr said.

Minority enrollment declines since 1978

Higher cost, aid cutbacks major causes

by Caroline Langer
staff reporter

The proportion of black and Hispanic high school graduates who go on to higher education has declined during the last decade.

According to Jack Taylor, acting director of Educational Development, as of fall 1984 there were 499 black and 79 Hispanic students out of the 16,000 total enrollment at the University.

This is a sharp drop from 1978, when there were an estimated 1,000 black and 100 Hispanic students at the University, he said. He added that this reflected the national decline in minority enrollment.

Taylor said the cost of higher education along with cutbacks in financial aid caused the decline of minority enrollment.

The Reagan administration has a conservative attitude concerning affirmative action projects and tends to "back off," which contributes to the declining funds, Taylor said.

Approximately 75 percent of the minority students currently enrolled at the University are of a lower income bracket and are the first in their family to go on to higher education, he said.

IN 1978, about 32 percent of minorities - especially blacks, went on to some form of higher education - the same as caucasians, Taylor said. He noted that as the financial resources for minorities decreased since 1978, so did enrollment. Now, in terms of figures, the University is back to where it was in the early 1960s before the civil rights movement.

Increasing the number of minority students at the University is one goal of the University Role and Mission Statement, Mary Edmonds, vice president for Student Affairs, said.

This will be done by informing the minorities about educational opportunities and financial aid. The University plans to make support services available to them once they arrive, Taylor said.

"The University is being very sensitive to the needs of minorities as it tries to create a diverse multi-cultural community," he said.

"The quality of academic programs at BGSU must be the main push of the recruiting process," Taylor said.

Smoking restricted

New policy adopted

by Patti Skinner
reporter

While the battle between smokers and non-smokers rages on, all public areas - including hallways in West Hall have been declared non-smoking zones.

In West Hall, which now houses the School of Journalism, smoking is allowed only in private areas such as offices.

The decision to restrict smoking was the consensus of the journalism and radio-TV-film faculty.

"Our aim in general is to make the building a non-smoking building, but we realize there will be smoking in private offices," John Huffman, director of the School of Journalism, said.

"Smoking is harmful to both lungs and equipment," Huffman said.

Every floor of West Hall has laboratories with equipment that could eventually be harmed by cigarette smoke, such as typewriters and computer terminals.

The television stations are located on the first floor and, in the photo-journalism labs in the basement, flammable chemicals are used.

"Common sense dictates that there can be no smoking in these areas," Huffman said.

THE NO smoking policy was also an effort to protect the mural depicting the history of mass communications on the first floor of West Hall.

University policy presently allows smoking in the hallways, restrooms and offices of academic buildings.

According to Dan Parratt, manager of Environmental Services, the University Safety Committee is preparing to review the University's guidelines on where smoking is allowed.

Parratt said the committee will look into the health effects of smoking and the legal rights of smokers and non-smokers.

Wayne Colvin, head of the University Safety Committee, said that faculty, administration and student representatives are being organized to review the present smoking policies.

Colvin said the committee will work over the summer to decide if the policy is still valid or needs to be updated.

Senate recesses until fall

The last meeting of the Faculty Senate will be May 7. After that, any Senate concerns will be put on the back burner until next fall, according to Don Boren, who will take over the chairmanship of the Senate at the end of this semester.

"I don't anticipate any (Senate) action this summer," Boren said.

Art Neal, the present chairman of the Faculty Senate, said the Senate does not meet over the summer for good reason.

"The senators are elected from the faculty at large and are doing research, travelling, or studying abroad (over the summer)," Neal said. "Therefore, it is not feasible for the Senate to meet in the summer. It will only meet if some type of emergency or crisis situation develops."

Boren said he is not expecting a crisis situation this summer.

While the Senate is not scheduled to meet as a whole, Boren said the Senate Executive Committee (SEC) will be doing some work over the summer.

"The SEC will meet to set up goals for the next academic year," Boren said. He added that he will also be involved in planning this summer so that the Senate will be ready to start in September.

Boren said one of his most important goals for the summer is to work on the selection process for members of the Faculty Personnel and Conciliation Committee.

"It is going to be a lottery system (for selection of members)," Boren said. "I would like to get the mechanism set up for FPCC."

Alex Haley
 Journalist and Author

My career as a journalist began in my spare time with lots of desire and no formal training. Minority news professionals were scarce then and getting into the news business was tough.

Things have changed some, but not enough. There are still far too few members of racial minorities pursuing news careers or being given a chance to do so.

If you have talent as a writer, cartoonist, graphic artist or photographer and you're interested in a career in the news business call this number toll free: 1 (800) 331-1750. Ask for Operator 128. ## GSS presents awards

Four graduates win for research at University

by Nancy Bostwick
 staff reporter

The winners of the Shanklin Award for original graduate research were chosen at the final award competition held last week, according to Kory Tilgner, president of Graduate Student Senate.

This is the first year that the University has offered awards for research that has taken place in part or in whole at the University. There were six finalists competing, who were chosen from 37 candidates who entered the competition, he said.

Two contestants in three areas of study each competed by giving a presentation of their abstracts that were submitted, he said.

Following the two hour competition, the nine-member panel of judges took approximately 20 minutes to make their decisions, he said.

The first place winners each received $750 and second place winners received $250, he said. There was a tie in the Social and Behavioral Sciences category competition. This was because the judges considered both presentations were equal, he said. As a result of the tie, the prize money was divided between both contestants, each receiving $500, he said.

THE FIRST place winners include: Ann Larabee, Arts and Humanities; Mike Bran-nick, Social and Behavioral Sciences; Kenneth York, Social and Behavioral Sciences; and Lakhath Goonetilleke, Sciences and Mathematics, Tilgner said.

Second place winners include Daniel Ward, Arts and Humanities and Mary Ellen Newport, Sciences and Mathematics, he said.

GSS will hold the competition again next fall with the hope that they will be able to increase the amount of the prize money, he said.

"I think it's (the award) now in a place that it will continue to grow year after year," he said.

USG members to plan for fall

by Nancy Bostwick
 staff reporter

Although the USG general assembly will not meet during the summer, USG members will still be active in student issues, according to Mike McGreevey, USG president.

"I'll be attending Board of Trustee meetings and I'll be working with them to see student input is represented," McGreevey said.

Working with administration over the summer will also give him the opportunity to establish contacts with administrators, McGreevey said.

McGreevey will be at the University taking classes this summer and doing an internship with the pre-registration program, he said.

Brad Krider, USG vice-president, will be living at home and working this summer but will come to campus periodically throughout the summer, he said.

Several cabinet members will also be staying this summer and working with McGreevey, he said. McGreevey will keep office hours and meet with those who will be staying, he said.

By staying here this summer, McGreevey believes that there will be a smoother transition into taking office and working with the general assembly next fall. Those members who are here this summer will work to develop goals and objectives for next year, McGreevey said.

USG members will be working with the pre-registration and orientation programs to encourage freshmen involvement in USG, he said.

contents" of his letters as they hand them to him.

Ginter said the guards are not supposed to read prisoners' mail, although "it's possible. Probably there are things that happen in there that I don't know about."

WOOD COUNTY has tentative plans to build a regional jail with Hancock, Putnam, Henry and Seneca counties, Ginter said.

The present jail then would be used as a five-day holding facility, according to Linda Amos, assistant clerk of the Board of Wood County Commissioners and a member of the five-county jail committee.

Representatives from the counties will be meeting May 8 to discuss the hiring of an architect, Amos said.

The regional jail proposal is part of the reason there have been no recent attempts to remodel the Wood County Jail, Ginter explained. For example, there is a room under the jail that was built to be an exercise room for inmates, but a tunnel never was built to connect it to the jail and no roof was put on the room.

Construction of the room was begun about eight years ago, Amos said.

It was never finished because the commissioners "ran out of money. "Inflation hit and things just didn't go the way we thought," she said.

Co-presidents named

Plans underway for student association chapter

by Phillip B. Wilson
staff reporter

Plans are underway for a University chapter of the Ohio Student Association (OSA). The OSA is an organization that works toward bettering education in the state of Ohio. It is composed of small public and private student associations.

The plans came about prior to the changing of OSA presidents last week, according to Kelly McCoy, OSA executive secretary and University coordinator. In the presidential elections held at the General Assembly meeting in Columbus, President Todd Baker and candidate Stephanie Peters campaigned through five ballots with neither claiming a decisive victory. Because of the tie, both were named co-presidents for next year.

"Todd is strong in legislative affairs and Stephanie is strong in organizational communication so they both compensate for each others' weakness," McCoy said. He added, "With the two working together, OSA should be more effective next year."

McCOY'S REINSTATEMENT as executive secretary brings future plans to develop an OSA chapter at the University next year. According to next year's Undergraduate Student Government President Mike McGreevey, the project will be looked into.

"I think it's important that BG is represented on the state level," McGreevey said. "That's why we are looking into the possibility of an OSA chapter, to ensure we have the proper representation."

McCoy said elections would be held next fall for a five-man council, featuring four undergraduate representatives, one graduate student representative and an undergraduate designated seat, held by the president of the student body or leader of the delegation.

She said the University council would help in the OSA's present objectives: to build up resistance against President Reagan's proposed financial aid cuts, to improve voter registration and to achieve electoral participation in OSA.

Ad runs in national contest

by Wendy Davy
reporter

It's been a year full of hard work, but for about 20 members of the Advertising Club, it's beginning to pay off.

According to Charlene Bruno, president, the group of students has been working on an advertising campaign for Burger King for the National Student Advertising Competition. The club recently entered and won a district competition at the American Advertising Federation District Regional Conference. This enables them to compete against 14 schools in the June 8 nationals in Washington, D.C.

The project consists of a 50-page plan book, a 12-page creative supplement and a 20-minute oral presentation with audio and visual aids, Bruno said. The creative supplement includes storyboards, billboard illustrations and promotion ideas. The oral presentation is a summary and explanation of the project.

THE PLAN BOOK, which includes both primary and secondary research, "shows all the rationale behind what we do (for the advertising campaign)," Bruno said.

For example, the group found through primary research that people do not like comparative ads. "So we decided instead to show in our campaign that their (Burger King's) high-quality food is a part of a fun lifestyle," Bruno said. She noted that the slogan the students chose for the new campaign is "Live it your way."

Bruno, campaign coordinator, a great deal of time was put into completing the extensive project.

Although the project is time-consuming and can create a lot of pressure, it is beneficial in the long run, she said.

"Advertising is a very competitive field," she said. "If you can't get an internship, this is a good experience."

New drug treats acne

Side effects common with Accutane use

by Marcella Grande
staff reporter

Looking in the mirror at the age of 20 can be a fate worse than falling down a bottomless crater for those who can't rid themselves of the craters all over their faces. Many acne patients well beyond the puberty stage have tried prescribed treatments and wonder cures. But perpetual pimples persist.

In May 1982, the Food and Drug Administration approved a new drug called Accutane and released it on the prescription market. According to the Medical Letter on Drugs and Therapeutics, Accutane "may be the most effective treatment ever offered for acne. It can clear severe lesions and lead to prolonged remissions that often persist for years after treatment is stopped."

The New England Journal of Medicine reported that in 1979, experimentation of the drug on 14 acne patients resulted in the complete clearing of 13 of the patients and an 89 percent reduction of the acne condition in the 14th patient, according to Dr. Jules Schwartz, a pharmacist at St. Vincent's Hospital.

"Accutane suppresses activity within the sebaceous glands that contribute to formation of acne lesions. Improvement is noticed in one to two months, and in three to four months, a dramatic clearing should be evident," Schwartz said.

However, the drug also has the potential to cause serious side effects. Schwartz said that when taking Accutane, it is "almost inevitable to experience side effects such as the drying of the lips, eyes and nose and lots of chapping."

But the manufacturer of Accutane, Hoffman-LaRoche Inc., stresses that this wonder drug can cause "significant adverse effects" such as impaired vision and intestinal inflammation. Schwartz adds that Accutane also can lead to easy bruising and liver disease. Moreover, both Hoffman-LaRoche and Schwartz warn that under no circumstances should pregnant women or women who are trying to become pregnant take Accutane because it has been linked to severe birth defects.

At the University, students who take Accutane have reported effects no more severe than extremely dry skin, dry nasal passages and especially dry lips, according to Cindy Puffer, the pharmacist at the Health Center. Puffer added that the drug is working on the students that she knows who are taking Accutane.

Since its three years on the prescription market, seven cases of severe birth defects and eight spontaneous abortions were linked to women who were taking Accutane, says an April 1984 article in Health magazine. Women who are of childbearing age, sexually active and planning to take Accutane are advised to take a pregnancy test before the drug is prescribed.

Hoffman-LaRoche urges women to take contraceptives one month prior to using the drug and one month after discontinuing its use. As a method of standard procedure, patients should let their doctors know what other medications they are taking.

For example, many patients with pimple problems are first put on an antibiotic such as tetracycline, which, when mixed with Accutane, may interact. Since Accutane is a derivative of Vitamin A, patients should not overdo this nutrient by taking other forms of the vitamin.

Accutane remains a remedy to those with severe cases of cystic acne. Many people with milder cases of acne pressure their doctors to prescribe Accutane, but the drug is only suggested for those who have shown resistance to other treatments, Schwartz said.

"This is a last-resort drug. There are patients who are 30 and still have severe cases of acne. These are the kinds of patients who take Accutane," Schwartz said.

Dr. Sidney Wolf, M.D., of the public interest research group said that while Accutane is holding up its "wonder drug" reputation, it only works for the appropriate patients.

If patients do take Accutane, they are urged to notify their doctors if they experience headaches, blurred vision, excessive chapping and other effects.

A look back on four memorable years of BG sports

Four years ago, I entered the BG News office, a little nervous and oblivious as to what I was getting myself into, and asked then sports editor Chris Sherk to be a member of his staff.

Now, four years later, after countless clips, memories of some great Falcon games, anxiety-ridden late nights pasting up pages on deadline and the ensuing pitcher (or two, or...) of Old Milwaukee at Mark's or Howard's, I have to say that long walk to the "sports corner" in fall, 1981 was the best move I've ever made.

Pinpointing my fondest memory would be impossible. I will never forget huddling around a TV and watching BG's hockey team bring a national championship home from Lake Placid, N.Y. I am not a connoisseur of hockey, but I can honestly say that the four-overtime win was one of the greatest spectacles I've witnessed.

A van filled with four sports writers and a photographer for a re-Marc's

by Marc Delph
sports editor weekend trip to Chapel Hill, N.C., to watch the football team hold its own against a powerful Tarheel squad on Thanksgiving Day. It made my day when a NCU student asked me where BG was located, and later mumbled "these guys are better than I thought."

JOHN WEINERT one-liners and his unpredictably loud game-day suits. Because of a Weinert superstition in which he wears the same suit until he loses, we were cursed with a bright yellow sport coat for what seemed to be an endless number of games during the MAC championship season of 1982-83. (I still see spots when I close my eyes because of that jacket.)

That championship season was also a memorable one. Three of the greatest players in BG basketball history on the same team: David Greer, Colin Irish and David Jenkins.

Staying up all night with Irish celebrating the end of his great career.

The championship season in football and the heartbreaking loss to Fresno State in the California Bowl.

Being able to say that I was on the same side as college football's number one passer when Brian McClure overtakes Doug Flutie's yardage mark this fall. And yes, I am confident he will do it.

The fond memories of some of the people I have met and worked with will also be lasting.

MY FIRST assignment was covering the golf team under coach John Piper, who was in his final year as coach. And somewhere, I'm pretty sure, I have a thank you note from him after I wrote a story about his years at the helm of BG golf.

Cross country coaches Sid Sink and Mel Brodt are both walking history. Sink was a great runner in his undergraduate days and Brodt could tell great stories about his 20-plus years of coaching at BG (my personal favorite was about olympic gold medalist Dave Wottle).

Weinert and Denny Stolz are also two great coaches. Weinert can also chew your ear off if given the opportunity.

I have also worked under some great people. Sherk, who is now assistant sports information director at BG, was my first boss. You just don't forget something like that.

His successor, Joe Menzer, was my idol; a terrible dresser, massive beer drinker, an avid Cincinnati Reds fan and he had much more writing talent than he carried respect for his editors. People who didn't care for him were considered "a joke," but that was just "One Menz Opinion."

My predecessor, Tom Hisek, was just the opposite as Menzer; not a hair out of place and no one ever saw his shirt tail. But, he too, was a great writer and could drink with the best of them. Menzer and Hisek are still together, cranking out the sports copy at the Lake County News-Herald in Cleveland.

So, as the space given to me comes to a close, so does my four years at the News. They will probably be the best four years in hopefully a long career in sports writing.

Candy may not be such a bad idea after all

by Greg Klerkx

Mother's Day is a lot like a final exam: everybody forgets about it until the last minute. For those of you who consistently forget both occasions, here's a tip—final exams are next week and Mother's Day is May 12 and, yes, that's next Sunday.

So what will it be this year for dear old Mum? A pair of fluffy red Deer-foam slippers to match the boxer shorts that you got her for Christmas? Or how about a gallon jug of Jean Nate Bath Splash (a sure-fire hit if your mother bathes 12 times a day). Stationery, napkin holders, a lifetime subscription to Car and Driver, Roger Whitaker albums... the list goes on and on. Boring is the bottom line.

Well, thank goodness for John Davis' book Gifts You Wouldn't Give Your Mother. Compiled from dozens of cheap mail-order catalogs, Davis' paperback presents the "best of the worst" in sensational gifts, guaranteed to put any mother's love to the test. Included with each of the 56 gifts listed are prices and ordering addresses: these are all real items that, for the appropriate fee, can be delivered to anyone anywhere.

But are these gifts really that bad? Well, there's really only one way to find out—find a guinea pig and put them to the test.

"Hi Mom, it's Greg. Hey, I've got this book of unusual gifts here and I thought that some of them might be kind of different for Mother's Day."

"Well that sounds interesting, dear. I thought you'd forgotten all about Mother's Day like you usually do. What did you have in mind?"

"Well, how about a five pound bag of bat guano?"

"What's that?"

"Uh, well... it's bat doo-doo. You know, kind of like dog doo-doo except from bats."

"Oh. Why would I want that? After all of those diapers I changed? Let the bats keep it."

"Ok, bad idea. How about something like a stuffed piranha?"

"A stuffed piranha. I see. No, I don't want one of those, thank you."

"Hmmm. Ok, here's one. How about a button that says 'I'd Kill Flipper For A Tuna Sandwich'?"

"That's gross, Gregory! (uh, oh—she only calls me that when she's mad) I like Flipper! I remember all of those shows on TV; he was so smart. Didn't he die? I'd kill a tuna to save Flipper."

Needless to say, these gifts didn't go

Mother's Day gifts that could make you an orphan

FRIDAY/St. Martin's Press

A model sports the "Peabrain Hat" from the book, Gifts You Wouldn't Give Your Mother.

over very well. However, Mom did like the Peabrain Hat ("I could give it to my boss") and the vinyl Barbaric Jewelry ("Good for parties"). The Bottled Bad Breath suggestion brought silence on the other end of the phone.

There are some items in the book that I simply didn't have the guts to suggest to Mom. Being an animal lover, she certainly wouldn't appreciate the C.H.O.W. (Cat Haters Of the World) t-shirt which features a cartoon feline being pureed in a blender. And she would surely have burned my graduation pictures if I had sent her an envelope stamped "V.D. Clinic—Urgent Report." Mom is open-minded, but I know when to quit.

For $5.95, Gifts You Wouldn't Give Your Mother is a pretty good deal. Lots of strange, sometimes rude, gifts and snappy commentary by Davis make it a better buy than the average movie ticket for about the same price. The book is a great gag gift if your mother is a true liberal who likes a good laugh, or sweet revenge if you happen to have a mother like Joan Crawford (there are a couple of semi-sicko items). Most of the items in the book cost anywhere from $3 to $15, certainly not too much to spend on dear Mom.

So take a chance this year and defy John Davis' claim: give your mother one of these gifts. If you survive, it just might be one Mother's Day you'll never forget.

Greg Klerkx is a senior magazine journalism major from Mt. Clemens, MI who is taking his mother to Burger King for Mother's Day.

Packing up: College memorabilia brings past events to senior's mind

by Teresa Perretti

I've been searching.

Searching this tired old town of Bowling Green. No I'm not searching for the best pizza in town or the cheapest beer, I'm looking for boxes to pack up everything I've acquired over the past four years of college.

It is time to put all of the memories behind me and begin shuffling through all of the things I know I won't need now that I'm going to be a responsible, working adult.

I've always enjoyed packing at the end of the school year because it is a great excuse to get out of studying for finals. Once you start packing you have to look at all your photo albums, papers, posters, mugs and anything else that brings back those pleasant memories.

Imagine after four years how long it would take you to pack everything that reminded you of something, that reminded you of something else and so on...

I'm trying not to be sentimental. I really need to get rid of the plastic beer mugs, the endless posters, the tiny pins with off-the-wall sayings, the tie-dyed Levi's that are full of holes, the endless stacks of the BG News which contain my name (Really, I'm not on an ego trip. I'm just afraid I'll never see my byline again - Hear about any jobs in journalism lately?) and all of the ticket stubs, cartoons and BGSU souvenirs overflowing the stolen milkcrates in my room.

I figure now that I'm going to be out in the real world I should be mature enough and generous enough, to know that the Salvation Army and Goodwill are dying to get their hands on my "college clothes" and other knick knacks that would go for about 5 cents a shot.

I don't think I could stand it if I saw someone walking around Toledo with one of my favorite sweatshirts - They wouldn't know how many parties and football games, warm-ups and classes that shirt has seen.

If clothes could talk.

Mine would probably tell me they want to go back to college for four more years.

Teresa Perretti, a personal friend of Friday editor Larry Harris and assistant managing editor of the BG News, is a senior magazine major from Toledo who is still searching for employment.

New Tom Petty disc a disappointment

by Greg Corner

Indeed Tom Petty and his Heartbreakers were correct in calling their newest release "Southern Accents." A majority of the LP radiates that down-home feel, a little too much for my taste.

"Make It Better (Forget about Me)" offers an interesting twist. The song has that country air to it while injecting some horns. The horn section seems to be an important element for Petty on "Southern Accents." A gallant effort, but "better left alone" is good advice for him.

Still, one must appreciate T.P.'s attempt at progressing musically. But I like his music just the way it was; good, solid rock with a hint of blues. Nothing fancy, just songs to get your adrenaline racing and blood pumping.

"Southern Accents" contains several cuts that reflect the Tom Petty of yesterday. A couple of examples, "Rebels" and "Dogs on the Run," are good rockers containing that Old T.P. sound; super rhythmic guitars (Petty on the 12-string, Mike Campbell on lead), keyboards from Benmont Tench and of course that whiny vocal provided by Petty himself.

However, his vocals on this record become annoying. The whiny quality that is his trademark seems to rub cross-grain by the close of the first side. Petty sounds better and more natural when he doesn't force that drawl.

"The Best of Everything" is a slow song with soft, mellow horns and is typical of Petty's ballad style.

Another fine cut, "Marys New Car," is also reminiscent of Old Tom Petty. Nice sax touch, too.

Some critics have said that "Southern Accents" is T.P.'s best work to date, but I beg to differ. This LP is only a fair effort; he's capable of a much higher calibre product than this.

Highlights: "Dogs on the Run" and "Marys New Car." Out of a 1 to 10 scale this record rates a 6.

Greg Corner is a senior radio-television-film major from Brunswick, Ohio.

NEW RELEASES: WHAT'S HOT AND WHAT'S NOT

Eric Clapton—"Behind the Sun"—The master of Blues guitar; "Forever Man" kicks. Enough said, rates a 4.

Autograph—"Sign in Please"—The only bright spot on this LP is "Turn UP The Radio." Sorry, this Metal band lacks. Maybe a new lead guitarist might be a good idea. He went to the Eddie Van Halen School of Tapping; he knows all the tricks but lacks the melodic fundamentals. Take some more lessons buddy. This record rates a 2.

Kim Mitchell album a waste of vinyl

By Greg S. Corner

Kim Mitchell, former guitarist for the now defunct Canadian outfit Max Webster, has re-released his solo project entitled "Akimbo Alogo."

This LP launches really hot and promising with "Go for Soda," the first single off the record which starts with a slightly-chorused blues guitar line, breaking into a nasty, distorted power chord. This cut is quite catchy but, unfortunately, is the best this record has to offer.

Mitchell definitely has an affinity for blues guitar and is quite good at it when he decides to play the damn instrument. He is very disappointing in the fact that this isn't all that often.

I think the key phrase here is "missed opportunities." The first problem is that the record is ambiguous; it takes no direction in as far as one particular musical genre. This is fine and is often a breath of fresh air from a musician that follows many musical styles. For "Akimbo Alogo," this is the final nail in the coffin. Bury this one, people.

The second error by Mitchell is that all of the songs are merely frameworks of songs with a beginning, middle and end. There is no body to the songs what-so-ever.

Take "All we Are" (a ballad) and "Called Off," for example. Both tracks have exceptionally good melodies going for them, but Mitchell fails to build on those strong points. Again there's nothing in the middle save some fine synth fills. Here's the missed opportunity: he could laid down some awesome blues guitar over those keys to make them sizzle right off your turntable. "Akimbo Alogo" does have its moments, though. "Caroline" is optimistic for Mitchell, featuring one of those good synth fills hammered home with a couple of really nice blues breaks.

I am very disappointed with lyricist Pye Dubois who doesn't say a great deal of meaningful things on this LP. He helped Neil Peart of Rush on a few of their earlier tunes. Surely when you study with the master, you must learn something. All-in-all, this not-good work deserves an "A," but only for effort.

Senior thanks those who made graduation possible

by Larry Harris

Graduation is like the Oscars. The ceremony lasts forever. You're always amazed at who gets recognized. And the most boring, unimportant people talk the longest.

As tempted as I am to announce "I deserve this" in my 2.3 seconds of glory as I shuffle across the stage to receive my empty diploma case from a man I've probably never met before, I'll settle for abusing my editorial privilege to say a word of thanks to those who have made BGSU more than just another four-letter word to me.

First, to my good friend Dr. Paul Olscamp: Thanks in advance for coming to my graduation. I have always supported you in my writing, to the point of alienation from my friends. You are also invited to my graduation party. I have told my parents all about you, and they are dying to meet you. It's BYOBW (bring your own blonde wife).

Next, to Professor Cathy Pratt, my lifetime guru: The University says you need a PhD. I say you need a vacation. Thanks for "showing me the light" when I was looking for a major.

To Patti Ritter, BG News editor: Thanks for giving me free reign over Friday. I told you our "Sex as Entertainment" issue wouldn't get us into any trouble. Little did I know it was being translated into seven different languages, though.

To my favorite campus metermaid: Thanks for pointing out to me that I had violated the law, and then turning around and throwing your cigarette on the ground.

To my bestest friend in the whole world, Gary Fahle: Even though you publicly support Big Boy, I want to thank you for saving me from joining a fraternity. I didn't win the Beta, but I saved a lot of money.

To all the scholastic honoraries who turned me down for membership: Thanks for nothing.

To Myle's Pizza, the official snack food of the 1985 graduating class: Thanks for delivering.

To my future employer: Thanks for doing both me and you a big favor.

To the Friday staff: Thanks. You're the best writers that'll work for free.

To Dr. Nancy Shafer, my stats prof: Thanks for giving me a "B" and saving my GPA.

To the Michael Stanley Band: Thanks for not coming to Bowling Green.

To my parents: When I wanted a Porsche, you gave me the '73 Impala. When I left home, you let me go without an argument (Funny, though. You didn't even hesitate. Were you trying to tell me something?). Thanks for teaching me the meaning of responsibility and that love is earned, not bought.

Finally, to one heck of a great readership: Thanks for voting, reading and your comments. Without you, we would be the Bowling Green Review.

Larry Harris, with tears forming in his eyes as he writes his last words ever at Bowling Green, is a soon-to-be graduate in public relations from Lemoyne, Ohio.

"I'm from Nevada, the real 'show-me' state"

by Shelly Trusty

I'm from Nevada, you know, that state where prostitution is legal. I get a lot of jokes about it. ("Hey Shelly, what kind of job did you get for the summer?") But I get my play of the jokes as well. A couple of days ago a friend of mine asked me if I collected pennies. "Just leave them on the night stand like everyone else," I said. My mother even jokes about it: "Remember you're from Nevada honey - never do anything for free that you can get paid for!" Of course she isn't serious (?).

Legalized prostitution is something I never really thought about much while I was growing up. It sort of comes with the territory I guess. The only legalized prostitution in Nevada is restricted to certain brothels in certain counties. It is not legal in Washoe County (where Reno is located), but only 15 miles from Reno, in another county, lies one of the largest brothels in the world. It's called "Mustang Ranch" and looks sort of like a one-story hotel surrounded by trailers. Mustang is isolated in a valley covered with sagebrush bushes and not much goes on around there except . . . Well, you know.

I hear Mustang is up for sale now, but for many years Joe and Sally Conforte have run the "Ranch." They have become household words in Nevada. It may sound strange to a mid-westerner, but some Nevadans really like the Confortes. They are in the habit of buying hundreds of turkeys for underprivileged families during the holiday season, contributing to charities and supporting artistic events.

Besides the fact that the Conforte family is constantly aiding the state with their philanthropic activities, most Nevadans are indifferent to, and some prefer having prostitution in the state. Some local traditions have grown up around the availability of legalized prostitution. One tradition I have heard rumors about is sort of a "right of passage." Some fathers, it is said, offer a unique present to their son on his sixteenth birthday . . . the father offers to pay a prostitute to "teach" his son about the birds and the bees. The father's rationalization behind this practice usually goes something like this: "I'd rather have my son get the experience he wants with a paid prostitute than with my neighbor's daughter." Providing, of course, that the neighbor's daughter is not a prostitute.

Oh, but don't think that prostitution in Nevada is restricted to females. There are male prostitutes, too. I haven't heard as much about the males as I have about the females, but I know they exist, after all, Nevada is a progressive state!

Because of prostitution, Nevada has had its share of unique problems. Several years ago there was an uproar when several "girls" from the Moonlight Ranch won the Governor's trophy in the annual children's Fourth of July parade. According to a rather tongue-in-cheek Nevada State Journal article, the judging was 4-1 in favor of the Moonlight Ranch entry. There was only one judge who was a woman, and she voted against the entry.

Overall, legalized prostitution doesn't really effect most Nevadans - but make sure you never call an employed woman in Nevada a "working girl" unless you are sure of her profession.

Shelly Trusty is an innocent English major from Reno, Nev. who is expecting to hear a lot more prostitute jokes after this is printed.

Bartending: getting paid for going out

Uptown's Abby Haubner whips up a delightfully refreshing alcoholic beverage.

FRIDAY/Liz Allen

by Patti Brazzill

Four people are milling in fifty different directions at high speed in a small, enclosed space; voices from all sides are demanding attention; and, for the fifth time, someone has spilled a red, sticky, alcoholic mixture from overhead . . . slammed again . . .

"It's kind of like going out and getting paid for it," Mark Stuplin, senior advertising major, said, describing his job as bartender at Uptown/Downtown.

"It's a fun place to work," he said, then added, "but you've got to keep a sense of humor."

It seems that life behind the bar can be as fun as the other side, and maybe even a little more.

"I have to put myself in the mood to work," said Michelle Roy, senior construction technology major and Stuplin's co-worker at Uptown/Downtown. "I'm a different person when I'm bartending."

Roy, who likes to dance behind the bar to "keep awake - and happy," said bar workers have to be nice to people. "You can pick your friends, but you can't pick customers," she said.

Doug Bice, sophomore physical education major, has his own attitude about bar drinkers. "They do more things that they wouldn't do sober . . . they have more courage," he said.

As a door-checker at Main Street, Bice is the first and last worker to see customers. He notices the changes. "Lots of them (customers) leave with a glaze on their face," he said.

And some of them leave (or try to) with even more. Bice remembered a time when a five foot, six inch customer tried to sneak out with a five foot, ten inch pool stick.

But Bice is not without tricks of his own. One night he placed a fake $20 bill by the door. "Two out of every four people that passed by bent down and picked it up," he explained. Interestingly, each of them put it exactly where they found it when they recognized it was fake.

To make sure that customers aren't smuggling bar property out the door, Bice is told to tap customers as they leave. "There have been a few times that I've tapped the wrong person or in the wrong place," he admitted. Although he's had to break up a few fights, Bice said, "I haven't really been in barroom brawls."

Kevin McNerney has worked in bars at home, as well as Margarita's, Main Street and Sundance in Bowling Green.

McNerney said, "Working in bars changes your impression of people. It makes you wonder if that's how you act (when drinking)."

He cited an incident at Main Street when a customer was injured. A group of football players challenged a guy to run into and tackle a pillar in the bar. So he did.

"Most people are friendlier when they drink," McNerney said, but it seems that some are just more confused.

McNerney described another incident at Main Street when a girl passed out in the restroom after closing. He woke her up, but she refused to leave without her grey coat. After a long search, she decided her coat was red and quietly exited the bar.

Although it may be nerve-racking to deal with bar crazies, most bar workers would have to agree with the philosophy of Theresa Boeckman, head cocktail waitress at Milton's: "It's funny to watch people - I love it."

Patti Brazzill is a junior public relations major from Toledo.

Meet the crew of Friday

by the Friday staff

1) Laura Myers, whose quest for insanity has led to a liberal arts education combining journalism with computer science, is praying for an internship with Marathon Oil this summer. Laura's favorite part of writing for Friday Magazine was the research for her stories—shopping in Toledo and viewing strip shows can be pretty tough work.

2) Greg Klerks once talked to Billy Joel's press agent but was still unable to swing a nude photo session with Christie Brinkley. In his ongoing search for creative Nirvana, Greg will be interning this summer as a general assignment reporter (whatever that means) for the Huntington Herald-Press in Huntington, Indiana. Oh, yeah. He's Friday editor next fall, too.

3) Mike Lawson is still in search of the quintessential closing paragraph.

4) Trish Cleary, former illustrator of "Clear Views" and a 1984 University graduate, is currently working in her hometown of Norwalk, Conn. Yet, she still manages to find time for visits to B.G. to appear in staff photos.

5) Tracey Batdorf, a once innocent freshman journalism major (before doing an article for the hot sex issue—

"yes, Larry, I AM old enough to at least know what the word means") will also be spending this summer in jammin' "B" town like fellow Brunswickian, Greg Corner. She will be putting her journalistic skills to use as a cashier at a local department store.

6) Connie Perkins, jobless but hopeful, has a good shot at a public relations position in the "Big Apple." If New York doesn't come through for her, she plans to jet to Europe in June, ride the gondolas in Venice and meet a romantic Italian gentleman to help her overcome the depressions of being unemployed.

7) Amy Whiteford, whose heart still belongs to the broadcast medium, took a position on the Friday staff because she wanted to see how the other half lives. She was planning on spending a relaxing summer sipping pina colodas and lounging next to her pool at her cottage in Waterville, but instead decided to accept a "real" reporting job at WMEE/WQHK in Fort Wayne.

8) Larry Harris, Friday editor, chose his career path carefully. Public relations looked the easiest (no language requirement), he said. He describes his work on Friday as "better than working for nothing" and, when he isn't hanging out in porno bookstores, he enjoys throwing catsup packets on the sidewalks and watching people step on them. After graduation, he plans to write his memoirs and do a national book tour. BG will not be one of the stops.

9) Marcella Grande, who narrowly escaped the almighty "F" in a genetics course she never needed, will be interning at a Cleveland hospital this summer so she can hang out in the genetic research lab and apply everything she learned. But before then, she will drop by Asbury Park, New Jersey to check out "the Boss's" roots.

10) Kim M. Zitzko, a Sicilian senior, hopes to graduate in August... If she passes Human Sexuality. (Dr. Algier, are you reading this because Kim plans to be Dr. Ruth Westheimer's press agent? If she passes Sex class, that is.)

11) Andrew Perles, Mr. always-in-a-good-mood, is again working at the fun-filled, sun-filled utopia of Cedar Point. Andrew thought of attending classes this summer, but then he lost his buzz and realized what he had said. Before writing for Friday, Andrew was an innocent little boy. After being forced by slavedriver/editor Larry Harris to produce an article on X-rated movies, his whole outlook on sex has changed. What a little exposed skin can do for a person! Right Amy?

12) Liz Allen, Friday photographer who doesn't really care what other people think, aspires to become chief photographer for Playgirl magazine.

13) Tim Dehnhoff was unavailable for comment.

14) Carl Buerger, one of the most incredibly busy people you could ever hope to meet, will be moving to the number one city in the USA for an internship this summer at the Carnegie Institute of Pittsburgh. While there, Carl will think longingly of the day he will be able to return to Bowling Green to write his next story for Friday.

Too good to be photographed:

Don Lee, who knows he's a cartoonist because the people around him all look funny, will be taking his note pads, camera and ink pens to work for a couple of newspapers near his hometown of Swanton, Ohio, this summer. He is looking forward to this because he will have two things he never had while working for Friday or the BG News: respect and money. Greg Corner, the biggest RUSH fan on this campus, wishes to express his gratitude to Friday for letting him expound his great musical knowledge and prowess on the population of BGSU. He hopes to return next fall with more hair-raising phrases such as "razor-like chord progressions." He will spend the summer in the thriving metropolis of Brunswick, honing his own guitar skills and driving the neighbors batty with his renditions of Rush's "Best I Can" and the "Working Man" solo.

Shelly Trusty is an innocent young lass who came to the wilds of Northwest Ohio to get at least 2000 miles away from her all too loving parents. She was taken into the journalism fold and corrupted beyond her wildest dreams! ("Bless you, you love god, Larry... I'll never be the same!") She plans to spend the summer as editor of BG News. Fall semester she will return as assistant editor of next year's magazine. (Are you ready for this Greg?)

Homemade dandelion wine converts useless weeds into pleasing beverage

by Joe Phelan

For most people, the dandelions in their yards are an unsightly nuisance. But instead of killing the pesky plants with herbicides, there is an alternative: you can drink them.

Dandelion wine is sweet and syrupy, and its taste is different from the typical grape vino.

According to the North American Indian Center Cookbook, two quarts of dandelion flowers are needed to make a gallon of wine. Take the blossoms and steam them in three quarts of water in a large covered kettle. A stainless steel dutch oven should be used, but any large pot will do.

After the flowers are boiled, set the kettle aside and allow the flowers and liquid to sit for 24 hours. This is the first of several waiting periods. Patience will be a virtue in making dandelion wine since you won't be able to taste the fruits of your labors for about three years. But it will be worth the wait.

While waiting, prepare for the next step. Find a wide-mouthed bottle at least one gallon in size, a rubber stopper with a hole in it, and a plastic hose. Fit the hose into the stopper and put the other end of the hose into a quart jar of water. All of the hoses and bottles should be washed with soap and water before use.

This device is a "bubbler," and is used when the liquid ferments. As it ferments, chemical reactions produce alcohol and carbon dioxide gas. The bubbler lets the gas escape through the tube which bubbles out in the water. The end of the tube in the jar of water lets the gas escape without any outside air reaching the wine.

After 24 hours, take the liquid from the kettle and strain out the flowers. Keep the juice in a clean gallon bottle. Then add three pounds of sugar, a half cup of raisins and one cake of yeast.

Let the mixture stand for nine days in the bottle with the bubbler attached. After a few days it should bubble a great deal. Just set it aside and occasionally check that there is enough water in the quart jar to keep the tube submerged.

After nine days, strain the raisins and other sediment from the juice by siphoning the juice through a sieve. Take another piece of rubber tubing and twist it into small circles at one end. After letting go, it will retain a little curl.

Put the curled end of the tube into the bottle with the curl facing up. Draw the liquid out of the tube and start siphoning it into another bottle. The curl in the bottom of the tube will keep the end of the tube off of the bottom of the bottle, separating the sediment and raisins from the juice.

After all the juice is strained, let it stand with a bubbler on the bottle for about 45 days. Once again, check the water level in the bubbler every few days. Now siphon the wine into smaller bottles to age. The bottles should be corked or sealed with a screw top.

Two or three years later, it will be time to crack the seal and enjoy. The taste of that delicious, sweet wine will be worth all the work and waiting.

Joe Phelan is a senior photojournalism major from Maumee, Ohio.

Feminist brings unique humor to campus

Kate Clinton believes the feminist movement has humor, and she has found that humor can be used to teach others about the feminist movement.

Clinton has trained as a stand-up comedian and composes and arranges all her own material. She has coined the word "fumorist," a combination of the words "feminist" and "humorist" to explain her dual purpose performance.

In an article from the Oakland, Cal. Tribune Clinton says, "A lot of what passes for humor now is just escapism. I still consider myself very much of a teacher. I have a definite purpose. A lot of comic don't. I do fish jerky humor, it's good for the brain and there's something to chew on."

Clinton, a former high school English teacher, has performed throughout the United States since 1981 and she has cut two comedy albums, "Kate Clinton: Making Light!" and "Making Waves."

Clinton will appear at the University tomorrow, May 4 at 8 p.m. in the Joe E. Brown Theater. Her performance is sponsored by Women for Women. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $3 with a student I.D. and $5 for all others. Information about the performance may be obtained by calling the Women's Center at 372-2281.

Students recall best memories from past

by Tracey Batdorf

In years to come, college graduates will reminisce on four years filled with meeting new people, all-nighters, parties and unforgettable events. To find out what makes college life so memorable, Friday took to the streets to ask students their "best" memory thus far at Bowling Green State University.

For Karen Reddy, senior social work major, her freshman year was one she seemed to reflect on the most. "Especially meeting everyone at the bars, namely Uptown. I probably haven't been there since my freshman year because of more academic commitments. It matters when you get up there (referring to status)."

Nancy Glanville, sophomore undecided major, feels a certain Hot Tub Party with one floor of girls and one floor of guys from her dorm was memorable. "We never really knew each other, but when we got together it was platonic . . . but still fun."

For many, the Manville Madness bash last year will stick out in their minds.

"It was one opportunity to spend with all my friends at once," said Wendy DeGarmo, senior IPCO major. "There was a band. It was sunny out. Everyone partied together, and it

"When I was a sophomore, UAO had an event called the Dating Game. Some friends wanted me to be on it just for a joke because I'd be the only black guy on the panel. I wasn't trying to win, but the girl picked bachelor number two . . . me. We were supposed to go out to dinner, but we never did. In fact, I still have the free gift certificate for a free dinner at home."

— Daryl Thomas

didn't matter what 'group' you were in. Nobody cared."

David Holmes, sophomore accounting/MIS major, agrees. "It was just starting to be springtime and everyone was rowdy. It was a change from the norm, not your average party."

Sporting events proved to be memorable to some students, fans and players alike. For Duane Funk, sophomore criminal justice major, his first season in rugby will always stand out in his mind. "I got to meet a lot of new people, go to a lot of parties and travel to different schools."

Al Freeman, sophomore sports management major, said, "The best sporting event I have ever seen in my whole life was the second time BG played OSU in hockey."

Initiation into fraternities and sororities proved a big part of many students' memories. Sandra Cully, senior journalism major, said, "The day I was initiated into Phi Kappa Phi last April was memorable because my whole family was with me."

"I really can't say why it was memorable, but it was when I was initiated into the business fraternity, Delta Sigma Pi," said Sarah Kaufman, sophomore finance/MIS major.

Daryl Thomas, senior creative writing major describes his college memory. "When I was a sophomore, UAO had an event called the Dating Game between Harshman and Prout. Some friends of mine wanted me to be on it just for a joke because I'd be the only black guy on the panel.

"I wasn't trying to win, but the girl picked bachelor number two . . . me. We were supposed to go out to dinner, but we never did. In fact, I still have the gift certificate for a free dinner at home."

Dave Nesbitt, senior retailing major, came to BG on an exchange program from New York and feels that this memory was "a good opportunity to travel and meet fellow Ohioans."

Some students don't have one particular memory in mind. Such is the case with Wendy Caldwell, senior criminal justice major. "My first football game was great because I came from a small high school and wasn't used to being in a stadium with such a big crowd. The Beta 500 was something to see. So was my trip with the BG gospel choir to Atlanta for a concert."

Bill James, senior computer science major sums up most students' best memory. "My freshman year, when I first met all my friends. We've always been together, about 10 or 15 of us having classes and going to parties together. We always talk about that, how we've managed to stay together."

Tracey Batdorf, Friday's only freshman staff writer, is a journalism major from Brunswick, Ohio.

Solution offered to "Bar Stamp Dilemma"

by Stacey Longacre

You downed a few too many beers uptown last night, and now the thought of a Miller just isn't as thrilling as it was then, but that isn't what's bothering you.

It's that darn bar stamp. Not that anyone would really notice the purple color on your hand, but a stamp is hard to hide when it's smudged on your right cheek.

Yes, you did it again. You slept with your face on your hand, and your hangover is only going to be intensified by the snickering of those you encounter until it wears off.

To make matters worse, moisture from sweating has caused the stamp to run, and now you have little rivers on your skin. Clothes can also be easily ruined by the accidental smudging of a wet stamp.

It's not just the fact that your face looks as if it has purple spider veins, but the phone rings and the sound is magnified one hundred times in your already pounding head. You grit your teeth and grab at the phone, luckily connecting on the first try.

"Hello," you manage to softly say. "Hi, dear. Your father and I are coming up to visit you today since you studied so hard . . . and on a Friday night no less."

Then it dawns on you after you hang up. Obviously, you weren't studying all night as you have "19" stamped on your right hand, cheek and left pant leg.

Panic strikes. With the old college try, you grab the first thing you spot. The peanut butter looks good, but rubbing it over the stamp just doesn't get rid of the color. It was even the chunky kind, too.

The old fashioned, sensible soap and washcloth follows up the sticky hair spray that didn't help either. After relentless rubbing, all you end up with is a red and purple raw hand and cheek.

Soon, you'll have gone through the entire medicine cabinet, and reasonable ideas give way to notions like "maybe I'll paint over it with White-Out."

There's a knock at the door, and you cringe a little at the thought of your mother's disappointment. Luckily, with some smooth maneuvers, you are able to shield the stamp from view, and a sigh of relief rushes over every muscle as your parents drive away. Too close a call.

After years of close calls, you have come to several conclusions on dealing with the Bar Stamp Dilemma.

First, make sure the parents aren't dropping in Saturday morning before a Friday night of bar hopping is planned.

Second, your mother will always ask "what is that for?" no matter how many times you honestly tell her it is from going to the bars. "I told you drinking isn't good for you. Look what it does to your hands," she probably gloats.

Third, the concoction that seems to work best on removing the problem is an astringent such as Ten-O-Six. Commonly found in drug stores, this miracle worker can remove the stamp almost completely.

Next time you're heading out for a night on the town, stop off at your local Lane's Drug Stores for some astringent. You'll be able to face that bouncer without a worry in the world.

Stacey Longacre is a junior magazine major from Westlake, Ohio.

FRIDAY/Liz Allen

Meet Brent Douglas: Alias "Friday Guy"

Dear Readers,

This man has been a regular Friday face since the beginning of 1985. Brent Douglas, the official "Friday Guy," has launched a promising modeling career by appearing as the official

Friday mascot in a number of roles.

Be it shopping for toilet paper in Kroger's, perusing old couches at a local thrift shop, or just hanging around for that "natural" photo, Brent's casual look and photographic charisma has captured the attention of modeling agencies everywhere, even if Friday readers never noticed we use the same guy for our photos.

Douglas began his modeling career in the spring's first issue by sporting a t-shirt for the cover photo. Even without his face depicted, the modeling world took notice.

Now seeking a career in professional modeling, Douglas bids farewell to his readers (lookers, actually) and is moving on to bigger and better jobs including modeling work for The National Enquirer, The Examiner, The Star and, of course, the J.C. Penney's catalog.

Brent, you study supermarket tabloid idol, you. The Friday staff and your faithful fans wish you success in your career. We look forward to seeing you in Calvin Klein skivvies someday in the Sear's fall catalog.

You will be greatly missed.
